Raising Caring Kids: Feeling All My Feelings

Children whose parents support them when they express feelings have stronger social skills and better friendships. Just like adults, children feel different emotions such as happiness, sadness, embarrassment, and anger. Children's emotions get more complex as they get older. This can be hard for children to understand. You can help by talking to them about how they feel in different situations.

Check out employment opportunities at Rosendale Brandon School District on the attached flyer. Substitutes for food service positions are also needed.

A flyer is attached with important information about preventing the spread of germs in the home and at school.
