Dear Parents and Guardians,

I want to thank you all for being so positive and supportive of our teachers and our schools. We are all learning new ways to do "school". As I have walked around the building these past two days, I have watched all of my teachers stretching themselves to teach in a way they have never taught before. I was able to drop in on Mr. Engel's fifth grade class while they were all online and say, "hi" and ask how everyone was. They were all excited and positive about the work they were doing and being able to connect with each other. I am so proud of how everyone has embraced this challenge that has been thrust upon us.

Please continue to ask us questions and send us any positives you are seeing at home. Sharing good news is going to be important in the coming weeks as the students miss playing with their friends and talking with their teachers. As in all national emergencies, we will eventually get out of this and transition back to "normal", but we need to support each other while we are in it. Thanks again for all you are doing for the children and the support you are giving to our schools.

Sincerely,

John Hokenson
